Magdalena (Colombia) to be the Department for Project Intervention to Improve Working and Living Conditions for Coffee Smallholders

The baseline study of the project, conducted by the Alliance of Bioversity International and the International Center for Tropical Agriculture (ABC), identified Magdalena as one of the departments with the greatest need of intervention to improve productivity and living conditions of coffee smallholders, especially when considering economic opportunities for rural youth, gender balance, productivity, access to markets and adaptation to climate change.

The department of Magdalena is located in the north of Colombia, with more than 4,000 coffee growers, many of them belonging to indigenous communities. On average, the coffee farms have a planted area of 2.76 hectares.

Magdalena has been identified as the department with some of the highest rates of rural poverty, youth unemployment and lack of rural education compared to the other six departments assessed as well as one of the departments affected most by the impact of climate change, facing a high risk of deforestation of the remaining forest area. For instance, climate change adaptation and mitigation strategies to avoid expansion into forests are particularly needed, as the forested area under deforestation risk was identified to be more than 63%.

The baseline study provided a broad input on the main challenges to be addressed within the training program that will be jointly developed by 4C, ABC, Federación Nacional de Cafeteros de Colombia (FNC), and NES Naturaleza in the coming months.
